Editorial . . .

No Hurry for Death

I was in a hurry—but death wasn't.

It awaited me around the corner of a lonely stretch of road outside Fillmore, Utah—as bleak an area as God ever created.

First I thought, "This isn't happening to me. It can't."

Then I thought, "Why is the car sliding? What are they doing at home? I mustn't keep my foot on the brake—they told me to pump it."

How long did it take me to die? I don't know, it seemed to happen so fast . . .

How long does it take to die in a car wreck? Long enough to pump the brake a third time? Long enough to catch a glimpse of an onrushing train? Long enough to lie, bent and broken, with life seeping out onto virgin snow?

Last year 37,800 Americans found out—the hard way. Another 1,400,000 almost learned and came away with painfully disabling injuries. The total cost of this unbelievable waste? More than $6,200,000,000. (If you stacked that many silver dollars on top of each other, they'd tower over 6,000 miles.)

This Friday Brigham Young University students will be taking to the roads, eager to get home and share the warmth of family love. It's very possible that some won't make it.

Consider these facts:

—Most accidents happen at high speeds. Young drivers have the least regard for speed laws, according to a study by University of Nebraska professors.

—Young drivers are responsible for more than their share of traffic accidents.

—The chances of getting killed are better at night—just the time when impatient students will be sharing drivers to make a long drive in a short time.

—The majority of accidents happen in rural areas, and the western states are the most sparsely settled in the nation.

This year when you drive home, arrive home. Be sure your car is operating well—now would be a good time to have it checked over. Know where you're going and what roads are the best to travel. Brush up on winter driving techniques. Don't drive if you get tired. Take an occasional break from the deadly monotony before it becomes too deadly.

Above all, use your head, don't abuse it. Deaths have happened before to BYU students over the Christmas holidays—and they'll happen again.

Don't let it be your obituary in January 4th's paper.

ST FUN, OR PROPHETIC?—Students campaigned for a longer vacation and may find their forebodings justified unless they now exercise caution on the highways. If this picture is taken again in January, will these four be in it? It's up to them.

Western Area Will See BYU Christmas Show

"Christmas In the Air," the Brigham Young University Christmas show, will pour various phases of the Christmas celebration to viewers on TV, throughout the reach of V and other CBS network stations in the western United States.

The show, being filmed in the Auditorium from 6-7:30 Thursday, will be video-taped in two segments. Approximately 150 performers will be featured in the show. The opening number will bring out the title of the show. Following this the representatives of a dozen countries will perform in "Holiday Harmony."

Shots of BYU campus life at Christmas time will be a part of the show with sleigh-riding scenes, a snowball fight and tree-decorating in front of President Ernest L. Wilkinson's home.

THE FINAL part of the first segment will be a nativity scene featuring Roy Samuelson, Brandt Curtis and Maughn McMurdie as the wise men, Carene Jordan as Mary and the Madrigal Singers as the heavenly hosts.

Five female vocal groups will begin the second segment of the show with a medley of Christmas songs, followed by the Brigham Youngsters singing, "I Won't Grow Up."

FACULTY children will be featured in one number of the second part singing Christmas songs and carols.

The finale will be presented by the Madrigal Singers, the Y's Men band and the BYU Dancers.

THE CHRISTMAS show was not filmed on campus the last two years, but Norman Tarbox, assistant director of the production stated that due to popularity of the show in previous years, it was felt that the show could be better filmed on campus with a studio audience. The public is urged to attend as audience shots will be used in the filming.

Coast Fights Cold, Snow

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (UPI)—As struggled to work today the blizzard swept East coast with arctic temperatures and snow-clogged streets in a day battle with the elements. Agency conditions present in many areas as strong and overnight temperatures showed 15 degrees stubborn efforts to break the 10-20 inch fall of snow swirled up the eastern coast Sunday and Monday.

"CANNED" CHRISTMAS — Presiding over the "mountain of cans" sponsored by the AWS-AMS are Jon Taylor (l), Kathy Perona and Richard Knight. KSL-TV told the group they planned to use shots of the can collection on television.

Driver Loses Hat

LONDON (UPI) — Socialite Mrs. Michael Lewis apologized to her host for being late to a party last night and explained that the chauffeur "lost his cap, and I had to come by taxi."

Escapée Slips Up

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—A Texan escaped from the city's honor farm yesterday and nearly got away except for one thing—his true-to-Texas form of transportation.

Frankie D. Good, 22, of McAllen, Tex., serving a 52-day sentence for impersonating a police officer, was easily spotted and cornered as he galloped along a highway on a rented horse.
